William Blair SICAV Emerging Markets Small Cap Growth Fund

Fund Performance & Positioning

The William Blair SICAV Emerging Markets Small Cap Growth Fund outperformed its benchmark, the MSCI Emerging Markets Small Cap Index (net), during the second quarter.

Second quarter outperformance versus the Index was primarily driven by positive stock selection across most sectors. The Health Care, Consumer Discretionary and Information Technology sectors were the most notable contributors to relative return. Within Health Care, Notre Dame Intermedica, the Brazilian healthcare plan operator, helped relative performance as the company delivered strong results driven by strong top line growth and an improved medical loss ratio. Moreover, the growth outlook remains supportive as the company is set to continue to benefit from the recent Greenline acquisition. Li Ning, a Chinese sportswear company within Consumer Discretionary was an additional source of outperformance. The stock price was propelled by Li Ning’s continued strong same-store-sales growth, accelerating ecommerce sales, and improved margins on the back of its better brand image and increased premium segment sales. Within the Information Technology sector, Globant, the Argentine IT services company, contributed to relative returns amid solid results driven by a robust demand backdrop for the emerging technologies that the company specializes in, and continued margin expansion. We believe the company’s unique business model and strong execution will continue to drive robust operating performance.

Partially offsetting these effects was negative stock selection within the Utilities and Real Estate sectors. Within Utilities, Mahanagar Gas of India hurt relative results, as weaker fundamental performance, including lower margins, hampered investor sentiment. However, we believe a solid demand outlook and recent price hike should boost operating results in the next few quarters. Yuzhou Properties, a leading residential property developer within the Real Estate sector, detracted from relative performance due to weakening sales growth momentum and deteriorating investor sentiment amid government policy tightening concerns. We exited the position as a result.

During the second quarter, Consumer Staples exposure was reduced through the liquidations of By-health and Indofood. By-health is engaged in the production and sale of dietary supplements in China. We believe tighter medical insurance policies and slower ecommerce sales growth will continue to weigh on near-term results; we sold the stock as a result. Indofood, a leading food and beverage manufacturer in Indonesia, was also sold due to weaker fundamental performance. Health Care exposure was reduced during the period, as Torrent Pharmaceuticals of India was sold amid ongoing concerns related to the US Food and Drug Administration’s observations post-inspection of the company’s Indrad facility in Gujarat. Wuxi Biologics Cayman of China was also liquidated due to market cap considerations while Zhangzhou Pientzhuang Pharmaceutical, the Chinese traditional medicine company, was sold due to disappointing earnings

These reductions were offset primarily by increases to Financials and Information Technology. Within Financials, Tisco Financial Group and Bank Tabungan Pensiunan Nasion were bought during the period. Tisco Financial is a bank holding company that provides consumer finance, asset management, brokerage and investment banking service in Thailand. We believe the company's management team stands out for its consistent track record of strong profitability and shareholder focus. Bank Tabungan Pensiunan Nasion, is the most profitable listed bank in Indonesia with a unique position in the ultra-micro segment. The bank's solid growth outlook is underpinned by strong loan growth amid increased micro lending penetration and large market opportunity with strong barriers to entry, coupled with improved profitability. Within the Information Technology sector, Network International Holdings was a notable new purchase during the period. Network International Holdings, based in the UAE, is the largest pan-regional provider of digital payment solutions in the Middle East and Africa and a recent IPO. The company has a leading position in the region, with above-industry margins and high free cash flow generation. We believe Network International Holdings is well positioned to benefit from the secular growth trend of cash to digital payments and an attractive macroeconomic backdrop. From a geographic perspective, notable adjustments during the quarter were increases to India, offset by decreases to China.

Market Outlook & Outlook

Global equities posted strong results for the first half of 2019 despite signals of decelerating global growth and mounting uncertainty surrounding trade relations between the U.S. and China. Gains across most markets were primarily driven by the more accommodative tone out of major central banks. From a geopolitical perspective, the prospect of a trade deal between the U.S. and China which fueled equity markets to start the year quickly soured in the month of May following news that the U.S. would increase tariffs from 10% to 25% on nearly half the goods purchased from China (roughly $200 billion U.S. dollars). Despite the unexpected volatility in May, equities rebounded in June to close out a strong first six months of the year with the MSCI ACWI Investable Market Index (IMI) up 16.07% year-to-date.

U.S. equities rallied in the first half of 2019 (+18.42%) after the large selloff in 4Q18. Growth in the U.S. remained solid but started to decelerate off of last year's previous highs. The Federal Reserve's acknowledgment of slower economic growth and dovish stance on interest rates helped ease investor sentiment and boosted returns across sectors, especially cyclically-oriented sectors such as Information Technology, Industrials and Consumer Discretionary.

European equities also advanced despite signs of significant deceleration in manufacturing growth. Specifically, purchasing manager surveys continued to point to deceleration in the pace of industrial orders growth and subsequent industrial production growth in the Euro Area. This was especially evident in Germany where manufacturing growth has been shrinking and business sentiment has weakened over the past year. As European sovereign 10-year bonds yields hit record lows in June, the European Central Bank announced that further monetary stimulus to boost inflation was ready if needed. The MSCI Europe ex U.K. IMI advanced 5.64% for the quarter and 16.74% year-to-date in U.S. dollar terms.

Ambiguity surrounding Brexit continued to weigh on the economic conditions within the U.K. Equities felt some relief to start the year after the U.K. was granted an extension from the European Union to delay the Brexit process past the March 29 deadline. But political woes returned following the failed final bid to get a deal through parliament and the subsequent resignation of Prime Minister Theresa May. While the Conservative Party began the process of selecting its new leader, who will also become Prime Minister, political uncertainty drove Sterling weakness amid increased expectations of a disorderly Brexit on October 30. The MSCI U.K. IMI advanced modestly for the quarter (+0.74%), but was up 13.16% year-to-date in U.S. dollar terms.

Equity performance across Emerging Market countries was mixed year-to-date. China equities declined 4.11% in the second quarter amid the trade war re-escalation and lower expectations regarding the level of government stimulus measures. Despite this correction, Chinese shares (including Hong Kong and New York-listed companies) were up 12.73% for the six-month period, while China's mainland-listed securities (A-shares) advanced 28.28%. Higher crude prices contributed to strong equity market gains across oil exporting countries such as Russia (+30.70%) and Brazil (+16.39%), but negatively impacted oil importing countries such as India (+6.43%) and Indonesia (+6.88%) year-to-date.

The global growth environment appears to be stabilizing after a period of deceleration in economic activity over the past year. Among the higher frequency data that we monitor, we have been encouraged by recent stabilization in the orders minus inventories component of manufacturing PMIs in the U.S., Euro Area, U.K. and Japan, signaling a rebound in industrial production volumes.

Looking forward to the second half of the year, we see geopolitical risks to economic activity abating: U.S.-China trade talks are back on, European Parliamentary elections are behind us, and the recently announced key European appointments (European Central Bank and European Commission presidents) suggest a better policy mix going forward.

The recent moderation in U.S.-China tariff threats is particularly important, as the escalation in hostilities and uncertainty about a potential trade deal weighed on industrial activity and order flows in the first half of 2019. At the same time, we saw signs of a bottoming in activity even before the announced truce in Osaka—notably that sales of semiconductors had troughed. This is an increasingly valuable indicator of near-term economic momentum. While the industry has consolidated and matured, semiconductors are used increasingly widely in almost all areas of industrial manufacturing and production.

Bond market investors are suggesting a different verdict on the global economy, however. The dichotomy of views expressed by equities and fixed income investors is best encapsulated by the decoupling of economic growth (equities) and inflation (bonds). Specifically, U.S. inflation continues to edge lower (1.6% YoY), even as the U.S. economy enters its 10th year of expansion. The situation is broadly repeated across many developed economies. It is little surprise then that the U.S. Federal Reserve feels compelled to lower rates.

From a corporate earnings perspective, net income growth appears to be bottoming in the Euro Area, the U.K., Japan and China after an 18 month period of steady deceleration. U.S. earnings growth has recently stabilized at 19% after weakening from 27% in December 2018, although consensus growth estimates for the next 12 months are significantly lower at 6%. This discrepancy in actual versus future growth expectations starkly contrasts with non-U.S. markets, where forward expectations are more in line with current growth rates, reflecting the shrinking economic growth wedge that has favored the U.S.

Equity valuations have stabilized and are broadly similar across different geographic regions following the sizable de-rating that occurred during the fourth quarter 2018 market selloff. Price/Earnings multiples in the U.S. and Euro Area are roughly in line with their respective ten year averages, while China is trading modestly below its ten year average multiple.

Although positioning changes by sector and geography varied across our funds during the first half of the year, there were some broadly consistent themes reflecting the market environment and company fundamentals. From a sector perspective, IT and Industrials weightings were generally higher due to our active repositioning into relatively attractive areas like software, payments and machinery. From a country perspective, exposures to China and India were incrementally increased across most funds, while Japan weightings were reduced in our global/non-U.S. funds.
