Market Commentary & Outlook

The 2017 market environment was characterised by strong and accelerating global economic growth. The broadening nature of growth was particularly noteworthy, as evidenced by strengthening industrial production volumes across the world. Corporate earnings results were bolstered by the expanding economic environment, providing a tailwind for investors. Beyond improving corporate performance, major national elections, especially in Europe, produced outcomes favourable for continued growth.

Risk assets led the markets in 2017. Emerging markets, supported by a weak U.S. dollar, performed the strongest, returning 36.8% in USD terms, as measured by the MSCI EM IMI. Developed markets also performed well, advancing 22.4% for the year (MSCI World IMI). China (+50.7%) led emerging markets performance with additional contributions from South Korea (+46.0%), India (+43.7%), Poland (+53.6%), Chile (+43.3%) and South Africa (+34.0%) illustrating the breadth of gains across the EM landscape.

From a global sector perspective, technology led by a significant margin in 2017, advancing 41.0% for the year (as measured by MSCI ACWI IMI), far outpacing the second best performer, materials, which gained 29.3%. Within technology, the software and services industry returned 42.2%, followed by semiconductors and equipment (+42.0%) and technology hardware and equipment (+37.8%). In contrast, energy (+5.2%) and telecom (+8.2%) were the two worst performing sectors for the year.

The performance of William Blair's proprietary quantitative models demonstrated that momentum, earnings trend and growth style factors outperformed during 2017, while fundamental volatility, quality and valuation factors underperformed. These style trends were more pronounced within emerging markets.

As we discussed in our recent Global Market Outlook paper¹, underpinning 2017 performance was a broadening of growth in both developed and emerging markets, which we have not seen in more than a decade. As growth broadened, it also strengthened. Year-over-year growth in industrial production volumes, a proxy for growth, ranged from 3% in the United States to 8% in Brazil.

When global growth drives expansion, it shows up in corporate earnings. In 2017, returns were driven predominantly by corporate earnings growth as opposed to price-to-earnings multiple expansion. That is not to say that multiple expansion was completely absent. Delving deeper into the sectoral composition of returns, Europe and the United States benefited from P/E expansion during the year, which we would expect in response to stronger growth performance.

The synchronised global recovery is well understood, and global growth remains firm. For us, though, it is important to understand the nature of the cycle and how far we are into it. The low-volatility regimes we have experienced in the equity and fixed-income markets carry potential risks. When change comes, it will likely be difficult, because we have been shielded from natural cyclical behaviour - from negative economic and market forces - for some time.

Sudden inflationary pressures and wage growth acceleration would likely alter investor return expectations, driving bond yields and volatility materially higher, while potentially triggering equity-leadership rotation both across and within sectors. Financials would be expected to benefit from higher rates, for example, but increased caution would be warranted for financially-leveraged companies. We want to be mindful of this.

Reflecting on some of the pre-eminent growth themes of 2017, including technology and the rise of innovation in China, we are optimistic. Despite the growing likelihood of a cyclical slowdown within the technology sector, we believe that strong secular growth will continue.

From a geographic perspective, we believe that emerging markets continue to offer attractive investment opportunities heading into 2018. In particular, there are abundant opportunities to invest in China's growth, but we are mindful of the significant share-price gains in 2017 from the perspective of near-term momentum reversal risk.

Performance

Fourth quarter underperformance versus the MSCI Emerging Markets (net) was primarily driven by negative stock selection across most sectors. Within Telecommunication Services, Bharti Infratel Ltd and Telekomunikasi Indonesia Persero (Telekom Indo) weighed negatively on relative returns. After jumping on speculation of a buyout by private equity and sovereign wealth funds, the shares of Bharti Infratel, the Indian wireless towers operator, declined on the back of disappointing 2QFY18 operating results and the sale of a $508 million stake by Bharti Airtel. Telekom Indo stock weakness was driven by investor concerns over increased competition and the impact of the company's mobile segment slowdown on operating performance. In addition, Emaar Properties, Real Estate, was an additional source of underperformance. The UAE based property developer and hospitality manager's share price declined after its special dividend fell short of market expectations.

Partially off-setting these negative effects were the underweights to both Telecommunication Services and Real Estate and positive stock selection in Industrials. Within Industrials, Bidvest Group contributed positively to relative results. Share price strength for the South African conglomerate was underpinned by accelerating operating trends amid strong management execution and acquisitions that were positively received by investors.

Calendar year 2017 outperformance versus the MSCI Emerging Markets (net) was strong, driven by a combination of stock selection and allocation effects. Financials stock selection was particularly beneficial, bolstered by China-based Ping An Insurance. Driving the share price was strong premium growth in the life and property & casualty segments. Ping An's management was also optimistic on the outlook for the key Value of New Business metric—guiding for 20-30% growth in 2018. Sociedad Quimica y Minera de Chile (SQM) and Maruti Suzuki India, Materials and Consumer Discretionary respectively, were additional sources of outperformance. Chile-based lithium and agricultural chemicals producer SQM's share price was supported by rising demand and prices for lithium, which is used in rechargeable vehicle and smartphone batteries. Maruti Suzuki's share price benefited from solid financial results amid healthy demand for the company's passenger cars in India. Maruti's competitive advantages include deep-reaching distribution and a premium strategy that has driven market share gains.

Partially off-setting these positive effects were negative stock selection within Real Estate and Telecommunication Services sectors and the overweight Brazil. Within Real Estate, Emaar Properties detracted from relative returns. The UAE-based property developer and hospital manager's share price was adversely impacted by its special dividend announced in December, which fell short of investor expectations. Management cited the need to preserve liquidity in light of ongoing development of large scale projects.
