Market Review

Global equity markets posted mixed results for the first half of 2018, buffeted by escalating trade tensions, the U.S. Federal Reserve's continued tightening bias and dollar strength. In contrast to the global synchronised expansion environment of 2017, equity performance in the first six months of 2018 reflected a growing divergence, with the U.S. economy, earnings and share prices maintaining positive momentum while the rest of the world rolled over.

The benign 2017 environment of low volatility and uninterrupted monthly gains abruptly reversed course in late January 2018, as worries about the extended bull market and narrowing leadership culminated in heavy selling pressure following reports that a handful of niche equity volatility-linked ETF products had suffered significant losses, stoking fears of broader risk contagion.

As the first half progressed, investors became increasingly concerned that the Trump administration's pursuit of protectionist measures would ignite a trade war with China and potentially derail the U.S. expansion. The slowing pace of economic activity in Europe combined with increased turbulence in emerging markets also weighed on investor sentiment.

U.S. equities extended their gains during the first half of 2018 and significantly outpaced non-U.S. markets, bolstered by strong corporate earnings and tax reform. Non-U.S. developed market equity performance was hampered by negative returns in Europe amid softening economic data and renewed political turmoil in Italy. The euro depreciated approximately 3% versus the dollar in 1H18, reflecting these concerns in addition to expectations for prolonged monetary stimulus from the European Central Bank, which announced that interest rates would remain at record lows through the summer of 2019.

Harkening back to the 2013 taper tantrum episode, emerging markets equities and currencies were hit by a significant rise in investor outflows during the first half of the year. The stronger dollar and prospect of higher U.S. interest rates had a particularly detrimental effect on countries with larger current account deficits and dollar-denominated debt, including Argentina and Turkey.

Political uncertainty and a deteriorating economic growth outlook also weighed on emerging markets returns in the first half. Brazil's nationwide truckers' strike was projected to shave a full percentage point off 2018 GDP growth, threatening the country's nascent economic recovery and further clouding the reform outlook ahead of the presidential election this fall.

Although Chinese equities held up better than most emerging market countries for the six-month period, investors became increasingly wary of escalating trade tensions as the first wave of U.S. tariffs on $34 billion of Chinese exports was scheduled to take effect on July 6.

Technology and energy were the top performing sectors on a global basis during 1H18, while telecom, financials and consumer staples underperformed. Within emerging markets, energy was the only sector in positive territory for the six-month period, benefiting from the rebound in oil prices.

Performance

Underperformance during the second quarter versus the MSCI Emerging Markets Small Cap (net) was primarily driven by negative stock selection across most sectors. Stock selection within the Consumer Discretionary was particularly detrimental, as travel related companies CVC Brasil Operadora e Agencia de Viagens of Brasil (CVC Brazil) and Modetour Network of Korea weighed on relative returns in the period. CVC Brazil is the leading Brazilian travel company that markets its products through exclusive stores, independent agents and online. After a strong rally the prior year, CVC Brazil's share price weakened amid negative investor sentiment on a deteriorating macroeconomic backdrop and real currency depreciation, reflecting the negative impact on international travel packages. Modetour is a high quality travel agency exposed to structurally attractive outbound travel demand in Korea, which is being driven by a growing emphasis on leisure/travel activities among Koreans, capacity expansion at the Incheon International Airport, and increasing demand from retiring baby boomers. Modetour's share price declined due to concerns over decelerating outbound travel growth and disappointing first half 2018 earnings. Financials was also a key detractor, dragged down by Argentinean bank Grupo Supervielle amid broader risk aversion impacting Argentina. Headquartered in Buenos Aires, Supervielle offers retail and corporate banking, treasury, consumer finance, insurance, asset management and other products and services nationwide to a broad customer base.

Partially offsetting these effects was positive stock selection within the Information Technology and Health Care sectors. Within Information Technology, Yageo and HUYA bolstered relative performance. Yageo is the Taiwanese passive components manufacturer. It is an indirect beneficiary of rising demand for high-end passive components, which in turn is driven by increasing complexity in wireless communication and electronic content gains in automotive and industrial applications. The stock rallied on favorable industry dynamics (tight supply and strong demand in passive components) which allowed the company to raise prices, coupled with the positive effects of capacity expansion and recent acquisitions. HUYA is a new IPO of the leading online games streaming platform in China, with 93 million monthly active users. We believe the company is well positioned to benefit from secular growth in live streaming and e-sports. We expect the company to deliver strong revenue growth and improving profitability as it attracts new users and increases monetization. Within the Health Care sector, Wuxi Biologics, a contract development and manufacturer of biological drugs in China, boosted returns. The share price accelerated amid Wuxi's strong operating performance and growth outlook supported by strong demand, market share gains, capacity expansion and strong pipeline of compounds likely to translate into significant manufacturing contracts in the future.

Underperformance year to date versus the MSCI Emerging Markets Small Cap (net) was primarily driven by negative stock selection across most sectors. Stock selection within the Consumer Discretionary sector was particularly detrimental, hindered by Minth Group and Via Varejo. Minth Group, the Chinese auto supplier, has diverse exposure to OEMs covering 80% of global auto production, including Nissan, Toyota, Honda, GM, Ford and Volkswagen. Investor sentiment deteriorated on the back of the company's disappointing FY17 results, broad automobile weakness and concerns over trade war rhetoric. We exited the position in favor of more compelling opportunities. Via Varejo is Brazil's largest electronics and home retailer. Despite the company's solid operating performance the stock weakened amid concerns about Brazil's economic and political outlook, truck strike disruption and currency weakness.

Partially offsetting these effects was positive stock selection within the Information Technology and Health Care sectors. Within Information Technology, Yageo, the Taiwanese passive components manufacturer, propelled relative results. Yageo's share price was boosted by favorable industry dynamics (tight supply and strong demand in passive components) which allowed the company to raise prices, coupled with the positive effects of capacity expansion and recent acquisitions. Wuxi Biologics, a contract development and manufacturing organization for biological drugs in China, boosted returns within the Health Care sector. The share price accelerated amid Wuxi's strong operating performance and growth outlook supported by strong demand, market share gains, capacity expansion and a strong pipeline of compounds likely to translate into significant manufacturing contracts in the future.

From a positioning perspective during the second quarter, Health Care exposure was increased to an overweight position through additions to existing holdings and new purchases, including Hartalega Holdings — one of the leading Malaysian glove manufacturers and the world's largest producer of nitrile gloves. This was offset by a reduction in Financials and Industrials exposures. Within Financials, South African holdings Capitec Bank, PSG Group and Coronation Fund Managers were among the larger liquidations. From a geographic perspective, notable adjustment was increases to China, offset by decreases to South Africa and Brazil.

Outlook

There is now a great deal of uncertainty about how the recently announced trade tariffs will impact intermediate term economic activity. Despite some market skepticism, global growth remains broad based and robust as we head into the second half of 2018. While global manufacturing PMIs declined from unsustainably elevated levels in February and March, the latest readings suggest that we are nearing the end of the in-cycle deceleration to levels in line with ongoing growth. Near-term economic fundamentals indicate that the current economic expansion has further to run. In times of economic expansion such as the current one, we expect companies to continue to post robust earnings growth. However, earnings growth cannot continue to accelerate at the same pace we experienced over the past several quarters, especially in the U.S., where acceleration has been pronounced. European corporates have also enjoyed relatively strong earnings growth, which is also likely to continue, but at moderately slower rates in the near term.

While the underlying economy remains robust and economic indicators continue to signal positive momentum, escalating trade war rhetoric will likely have substantial consequences on market volatility, inflation, and growth dynamics over the coming quarters. As examples, tariffs on Canadian lumber are adding to higher costs for wood, which are fueling price increases of up to $9,000 for a new single-family home, according to the U.S. National Association of Homebuilders.

More broadly, some U.S. companies are reportedly using the threat of new tariffs as a reason to raise prices. In short, tariffs amount to either a tax on consumption or corporate margin deterioration if firms choose to absorb some portion of cost increases. In aggregate, it worsens the trade-off between growth and inflation, and will likely lead to tighter monetary policy. Much of this has not played out yet, because the U.S. administration has moved only recently. However, these effects will begin to manifest themselves over the coming quarters, and it is quite possible that this will bring us closer to the end of the current economic expansion cycle.

Longer term, we fear the U.S. administration's unilateral view of trade policy is suggesting an end to the decades-long building of integrated global markets and supply chains. If the U.S. chooses to limit or regulate trade however it sees fit, regardless of what agreements it may have signed in the past, trade and investment will become more volatile and more politicised. Multinationals from around the world will be more inclined to disentangle their operations from the U.S. The impact of this will only be revealed gradually over the coming years, but could imply meaningful changes to competition, quality, and innovation.
